

Cascadia Water Trail Campsites

Strawberry Island The North Sound Area

This small island campsite, located on the western channel and exposed side of Cypress Island, is a wonderful destination when the weather is fair and seas are calm. Perched on a small rocky point, Strawberry Island's small bay affords only minor protection from southerly winds and is the bet way to approach this steep-sided rocky island.

Natural History.

The Wilds Expedition, 1841, found berries on the little island and named it Hautboy. This name, pronounced "Hoboy," is the common name of "fragaria elatior," a species of strawberry. On mapss made after the 1920's, the little island is charted as Strawberry Island.
