

Cascadia Water Trail Campsites

Triton Cove State Park Hood Canal

This sheltered park was once a privately operated RV park. It is a popular day use boat ramp. During shrimp season the days may start very early in the morning. Busy Highway 101 borders the upland portion so you will want to take advantage of vegetation buffers to reduce traffic noise in your tent.

Natural History.

The cove is fed by Fulton Creek and is full of life. The protected cove makes this a great spot to explore on lower tides or when wind and waves obscure visibility on open waters. The remains of a pier are just a few feet beyond reach on the southerly end of the park. Rock and concrete steps give hints of former development.
